

Tiny Trouble, Big Discoveries

For shared looking, ages 3–9. Start with one bright color or a large pictured clue; offer small details and descriptive clues when a child wants more. An adult can read, point and help with zoom. Difficulty labels are suggestions, not an assessment.

Look together. Let the picture lead.

Let your child choose a toy, a color or one of the three characters. Follow that first discovery before opening another clue.

Look at the whole room together. Choose any three clues, or stop after one. Younger children can match a picture or point; older children can give a place-word clue before revealing the answer.

Look together

Start with the whole picture. Let a child choose the first place to explore.

Find three things

Pick any three clues—or invent your own. It is fine to stop sooner.

Describe one

Use a color, shape or place word without pointing. Let someone else look.

Imagine what comes next

Choose a tiny moment and tell, draw or act out one gentle next chapter.

A few gentle invitations

What helped you find that exact moment?

Grown-up cue: Try a color, an action or a nearby object: behind the towels, beside the train track or at the red curtain.

Can you describe one thing without pointing?

Grown-up cue: Offer a shape, color or place word. Let your partner look, then swap roles.

What might happen next in the little music corner?

Grown-up cue: Invite a gentle imagined moment, sound, drawing or movement. Separate what is visible from what you invented.

Search as a team, offer a choice between two areas and let an adult operate the zoom. Welcome gestures, signing, drawing and home-language responses. Blue, Pinky and Green appear more than once; each clue names one specific scene. They are pretend story germs, not a picture of real microbes.

Choose one favorite discovery to tell someone about. Leave the rest for another day if you wish.

A shared classroom adventure

15 flexible minutes

Purpose

Practice careful observation, positional language, a bounded count of three and describing visible colors or patterns with a partner.

Bring

A screen with the panorama or a printed picture; Optional picture-clue cards; Paper and drawing materials

1. Look together

Invite children to choose a corner of the toy room. Introduce Blue, Pinky and Green and explain that the same three characters appear in different pictured moments.

2. Choose three clues

Try one find clue, one color clue and Green's stack of three sponges. Touch or point to top, middle and bottom once each; count only that stack.

3. Guide a partner

Describe one target with color, shape or place words without pointing. A gesture, drawing or home-language clue is equally welcome.

4. Imagine a gentle next moment

Choose the music corner or a familiar book scene. Tell, draw or act out a short next moment, then name one detail in the picture that inspired it.

Make room for every child

Begin with a large character or bright color, give a choice of two places and allow partners to share zoom control. Small clues are optional. A single shared observation is a complete contribution.

Pause and reflect

Which part of your answer could you see in the picture, and which part did you imagine?

Words to try clue: a detail that helps you find or work something out stack: things placed one above another striped: marked with long bands of color checked: a pattern made from crossing lines and squares

beside: next to something

Keep the story going

Read a Germ Gang story, then return to recognize the trio, the playroom toys and the bubbly sink-world details. This imagined seek-and-find room brings motifs from the two books together; its repeated character moments are a panorama convention, not extra members of the gang.

The Great Germ Goof-Up - Return to the trio's silly playroom mischief, where a child's everyday healthy habits send their plans awry.

The Soap Tsunami - Meet Blue, Pinky and Green in a bubbly sink adventure, then look for towels, sponges and bubbles in the panorama.
